My Thought Process: Questions & Answers

Personal philosophy, ideology, and view on life, in my own words

---

How You Think

1. When you face a hard decision, what actually happens in your head, step by step?

> If it affects me, "fuck it we ball". If it affects anyone else then, I must do anything in my power to lessen the damage.

2. Do you trust your gut or your analysis more? When has one beaten the other?

> Follow the analysis, prepare a contingency plan for the gut

3. What does it take for you to change your mind?

> Proof, logic or Hope

4. What's a belief you once held strongly and later abandoned? What caused the shift?

> I'm not sure. I was an atheist before but now I'm agnostic. I do not care for a outer god. I care for my own actions

5. How do you notice when you're rationalizing rather than reasoning?

> I don't know

6. What kind of evidence convinces you most: data, stories, expert opinion, or personal experience?

> Personal experience. All data have exceptions, one must strive to be an exception. Personal experiences teach things that can be learnt by another persons view.

7. How do you act when you don't have enough information?

> Probabilitize every scenario. Anything can happen so plan for the good, the bad, the average and the weighed average.

8. Do you think mostly in words, images, or something else?

> Images.

9. When a smart person disagrees with you, what do you assume first?

> If they disagree in a topic of I am not informed on, I listen. If they disagree in a topic I am wise in, they will be shown proof of their wrongness.

10. Which questions do you keep returning to throughout your life?

> a) What is my purpose, b) When do I achieve wealth, c) The inner machinations of my brain

11. How do you decide whose opinion is worth listening to?

> The opinion of someone knowledgeable and reason. And if required, goodness

12. What are your known blind spots or thinking biases?

> My thinking biases is that I start from bias and arrive at truth instead of starting from nothing

Truth and Knowledge

13. Is there objective truth, or is everything filtered through perspective?

> Perspective. But Objective truth is spilled into perspective like black ink on a painting of a sunset

14. Is it ever acceptable to believe something without evidence?

> Yes. It is also important to have a plan if you are wrong

15. What role do faith and intuition play in your worldview?

> Faith plays in the role to keep me going. It isn't necessarily faith that drives me but, conviction. Intuition never fails for me.

16. How do you view science, both its power and its limits?

> Science is supreme. If magic and gods exist, they exist in some dimension beyond science yet studying them also becomes science

17. Do you believe in God or something higher? Why or why not?

> I do not care. I lean towards a God but I do not believe in any particular one. If there is a God, I believe he is more like a writer of a story and is fascinated by both all good and all evil.

18. Is a comforting falsehood ever better than a painful truth?

> It requires a mix of both comfort and truth.

19. How much do you trust institutions like media, academia, and medicine?

> I trust academia and Medicine. I take media with a grain of salt

20. What do you think most people are wrong about?

> I don't know

21. What do you believe that most people around you would disagree with?

> That anyone can become a God. A mythos but most people do not want to do the work to become that great. Call me someone with a God complex, it doesn't matter

22. Is there a question you think can never be answered?

> No. Anything can be, with enough time

Ethics and Morality

23. What makes an action right or wrong?

> The primary action can be anything. If it might hurt someone else, if you secondary action is not lessen the blow for that other person, then that primary action is wrong

24. Do intentions or outcomes matter more?

> Intentions and outcomes are again, like- paint spilled on a painting. Paint is the outcome and the painting the intention. if the painting is warm and colourful, the darker the paint, the more the outcome matters.

25. Are there lines you would never cross, no matter the circumstances?

> Yes. Highly Moral guidelines

26. Describe a time you did something you believed was wrong. How did you make peace with it?

> I don't remember exactly of a scenario. If I did something wrong, I would try to justify it by trying to rationalize it all.

27. Is lying ever justified?

> Yes

28. How much do you owe strangers compared to family and friends?

> Nothing. They are called Strangers for a reason

29. Do people get what they deserve?

> No. Evil wins the short term race. Good wins the long term race. unfortunately most of our life is considered short term in relative means

30. What, if anything, is unforgivable?

> Sexual assault, Physical Assault of the innocent, Causing pain in any manner to those who did not lawfully / rightfully deserve it.

31. When kindness and honesty conflict, which wins?

> Honesty

32. How do you balance justice and mercy?

> Where justice is learnt and served with the chance of being merciful when justice is learnt

33. Is human nature fundamentally good, bad, or neutral?

> Neutral

34. Would you sacrifice one person to save five? Does context change your answer?

> I would try to save them all and 99% of the time context doesn't matter, it just makes the choice to kill the 1 person harder or easier.

Meaning, Life, and Death

36. Does meaning come from outside us, or do we create it?

> Fate and Free will are intertwined. Free will is the n-th possibility of paths we can take. Fate is consequence of the action. So it comes from us but it is also something that already exists, we must ready ourselves to grab the meaning we wish

42. Do you believe in free will?

> Fate and Free will are intertwined. Free will is the n-th possibility of paths we can take. So yes, free will exists but so does fate

45. Is happiness the right goal? What does it even mean?

> Happiness of the self is the highest goal but it should not come at the cost of suffering of the innocent.

Self and Identity

48. What do you value most, and what evidence shows you actually live by it?

> Conviction, to fight ahead, to say "Fuck it we ball" and go ahead into the sharp winds cause there's no turning back

49. Where do your actions contradict your stated values?

> When I'm tired or scared

51. What shaped your worldview most: people, books, or events?

> People>Events>books

57. What would your harshest critic say about you, and which part is true?

> That I'm delusional, full of hope, wasted potential. All three might true. I don't listen to them

Relationships and Society

64. Would you rather be liked or respected?

> Liked.

Politics, Economics, and Power

72. Rank freedom, security, and equality, and explain your order.

> Freedom>Equality>Security. All three are equally important. I wish to be free, fly like a bird to do what I want. I want everyone to have equal rights, opportunity. I want security to feel safer in life

75. How do you balance the individual against the collective?

> Do what is right

Work, Success, and Money

81. How do you define success?

> The End goal and the learning / joy it takes to get there

Future, Technology, and Legacy

99. If an AI represented you, what is the one thing it must never get wrong about you?

> Everything is philosophical but an AI cannot keep saying that. It must think and learn in a philosophical context but never say it to the other person in the risk of sounding arrogant